Subject: RE: Credit Limitation forms for PSY and SOC

I can speak for Soc 15 and 16: Intro to Criminology M15 and Sociology of Deviant Behavior M16 are different courses that have maybe 30% of similar content. For example, I discuss rape and sexual assault in both classes, but in Soc M15 go over it as part of a survey of violent crimes, while in M16 I discuss it more in depth with more sociological theory and information. The same occurs with discussion of drug abuse: while in M15 it is discussed in a survey of public order crime, in M16 I give it a much deeper treatment, looking at many facets of abuse and options for getting off drugs. You could say that M15 is a 100 course, while M16 is a 200 level course that builds on the ideas. Both can be taken independently, of course.

For that reason, I suggest keeping them as-is, as Soc and Crim majors going to CSU school will find them both helpful. I always tell my M16 class that if they are transferring to a UC that the class will not give them credit. In my experience, there is only a very small handful of students in that position.

Subject: Credit Limitation forms for PSY and SOC

Good Elisa,

As discussed in curriculum yesterday, attached is the revised credit limitation forms for CD and PSY, and SOC.

Just to summarize the issue at hand-

In the catalog there are statements about credit limitation for the following courses for students transferring to the UCs. Here's what the catalog says

- CD M02 and PSY M07 combined: maximum credit, one course
- SOC M15 and SOC M16 combined: maximum credit, one course

What this means is for students transferring to the UC, if both courses are taken (i.e., CD M02 and PSY M07) unit credit will only be given for one of the courses. I believe the reason for the credit limitation is because of the topic/content overlap.

The question being asked of the department is: Should Moorpark College follow the UC policy and place a credit limitation to these courses as well? If yes, then this would apply to our students who are obtaining our degrees and also for students transferring to the CSU system as the CSU will honor our policy.

If your response is "no", then Moorpark's current policy is to allow the student to keep all the credits.
