USING CHICAGO STYLE NOTES IN YOUR RESEARCH PAPER

- Whenever you refer to a source in your research paper (quoting it, paraphrasing or summarizing it), you must insert a footnote in the text to link the information to its source.
- Notes should be numbered consecutively.
- Superscript numbers should be placed at the end of a sentence or clause in your text, linking them to citation information.
- The first note of each source should include all relevant information about the source (see example below).
  - The second time you cite a source, the note will contain a shortened citation (see example below).
  - If you cite the same source two or more times consecutively, you may use the abbreviation ibid. (from ibidem, "in the same place") to take the place of the shortened citation.

Note Citation

1. Geoffrey C. Ward and Ken Burns, The War: An Intimate History, 1941–1945 (New York: Knopf, 2007), 52.

Shortened Citation

(use this form when you cite a source

2. Ward and Burns, War, 61.

Ibid. Note Form

Same Page Number

(use this form only when citing the same source consecutively using the same page number)

3. Ibid.

Ibid. Note Form Different Page Number

(use this form when citing the same source consecutively using a different a page number)

4. Ibid., 25-29.
